Eleve Behavioral Health Provides Outpatient Mental Health and Addiction Treatment for South New Jersey

September 11, 2026

VOORHEES TOWNSHIP, NJ - September 11, 2026 -
Eleve Behavioral Health, an outpatient behavioral health provider at 1307 White Horse Rd Ste# A103, Voorhees Township, NJ 08043, published an overview of the treatment programs it operates for adults across Camden County and South New Jersey. The practice treats mental health conditions, substance use disorders, and gambling disorder through two structured levels of care, and holds accreditation from The Joint Commission alongside LegitScript certification.

The mental health program treats anxiety disorders, depression, bipolar disorder, obsessive-compulsive disorder, personality disorders, schizoaffective disorder, schizophrenia, and trauma and PTSD, including co-occurring presentations where a psychiatric condition and substance use appear together. The substance use program covers alcohol, benzodiazepines, cocaine, heroin, fentanyl, kratom, marijuana, methamphetamine, opiates, and prescription drug addiction. A dedicated gambling disorder track addresses online gambling, sports betting, casino, and poker-related addiction ? a program relatively few outpatient providers in New Jersey operate.

Care is delivered at two levels: a Partial Hospitalization Program, the most structured outpatient option, and an Intensive Outpatient Program that allows patients to keep work, school, or family schedules while in treatment. Clinical methods include cognitive behavioral therapy, dialectical behavior therapy, motivational interviewing, acceptance and commitment therapy, and trauma-informed approaches, supported by psychiatric services, medication management, medication-assisted treatment with Suboxone, Subutex, and Vivitrol, pharmacogenetic DNA testing, case management, and aftercare planning. Clinical content published by the practice carries medically reviewed bylines.

Accreditation and certification form the practice's third-party verification layer. The Joint Commission accredits behavioral health organizations against national standards for quality and safety, and LegitScript certification verifies that a treatment provider operates legally and transparently, a prerequisite for advertising treatment services on major advertising platforms. Both credentials apply to the practice as a whole, and both are independently verifiable at the source.

Treatment begins with a clinical assessment that determines the appropriate level of care. Patients who need daily clinical structure enter the Partial Hospitalization Program; patients balancing work, school, or caregiving enter the Intensive Outpatient Program. Pharmacogenetic DNA testing is available where medication response is a clinical question, and case management and aftercare planning run from admission through discharge.

For many adults weighing mental health treatment in South Jersey, the practical choice has been driving into Philadelphia or delaying care altogether; a Joint Commission-accredited program in Voorhees Township places structured treatment inside Camden County instead.

The practice's two program tracks share one clinical team, so a patient who begins in the Partial Hospitalization Program and steps down to the Intensive Outpatient Program keeps the same therapists, psychiatric provider, and treatment record. Gambling disorder, substance use, and psychiatric conditions are assessed together at intake because they frequently co-occur, and the treatment plan addresses each where present.

The practice accepts a number of insurance providers and verifies coverage before admission. Program details for every condition treated are published by Eleve Behavioral Health, and the practice profile is available through Eleve Behavioral Health on Google.
