Affiliated Court Reporters Delivers Specialized Support for Class Action Litigation in Minnesota

July 24, 2026

INVER GROVE HEIGHTS, MN - July 24, 2026 -

Affiliated Court Reporters brings extensive experience to the complex demands of class action litigation across Minnesota and Western Wisconsin. The firm provides certified court reporters and comprehensive litigation support services tailored to the unique challenges of multi-party cases, where high volumes of depositions, tight deadlines, and detailed documentation are standard.

Class action proceedings often involve numerous plaintiffs, expert witnesses, and intricate legal issues that generate substantial records. Affiliated Court Reporters addresses these requirements through precise realtime reporting, professional videography, and efficient transcript management. Their team ensures that every detail is captured accurately, supporting legal teams from the discovery phase through trial preparation.

The firm's capabilities include real-time reporting that delivers live transcripts during proceedings, enabling attorneys to make immediate strategic decisions. This service proves especially valuable in extended depositions or hearings where rapid access to testimony can influence case direction. Combined with hyperlinked exhibits and word indexing, the tools streamline review processes and enhance overall efficiency.

Professional legal videography further strengthens support for class actions. High-quality recordings with text-to-video synchronization allow legal teams to reference both verbal and visual elements of testimony. This integration is particularly useful when demonstrative evidence or witness demeanor plays a significant role in the litigation.

Patricia A. Hulse, RPR, CRR, CRC, owner of Affiliated Court Reporters, spoke about the firm's approach to these cases. "Class action litigation requires a level of precision and coordination that our experienced team is well-equipped to provide," Hulse said. "We focus on delivering accurate, timely records that allow attorneys to concentrate on advocacy rather than logistical concerns."

Hulse, with more than four decades in the profession and full ownership of the firm since 2020, oversees operations rooted in Minnesota since the 1950s. This heritage contributes to a deep understanding of regional court practices and the specific needs of local and regional law firms handling class actions.

The firm offers flexible formats, including in-person, remote, and hybrid sessions through secure platforms. Dedicated technical support ensures smooth execution, with features such as free link setup and interpreter integration for multilingual participants. Conference rooms in the Minneapolis-St. Paul area, conveniently located near MSP International Airport, accommodate in-person elements when required.

Client feedback highlights the firm's reliability in managing demanding cases. Attorneys with relationships spanning 20 to 40 years consistently note the accuracy, responsiveness, and professionalism of the team. One long-term client emphasized the firm's ability to handle urgent requests and travel arrangements, while others praised the quality of transcripts and video records in complex matters.

Hulse added, "Our goal is to serve as a dependable partner in high-stakes litigation. By combining technology with hands-on expertise, we help ensure that the record supports effective resolution of class action matters."

As a locally owned, reporter-operated business and independent member of the National Court Reporters Association, Affiliated Court Reporters maintains a boutique style that prioritizes personalized service. The firm supports a range of practice areas beyond class actions, including construction disputes, medical malpractice, personal injury, employment law, and workers' compensation, but its structured approach to large-scale cases sets it apart.

Online scheduling and digital access to transcripts and exhibits provide additional convenience. Expedited delivery options and secure repositories help meet the accelerated timelines common in class action work. These features, paired with strict confidentiality protocols, align with the sensitive nature of such proceedings.

The emphasis on specialized support for class action litigation reflects broader trends in the legal field, where collective actions require robust documentation and adaptability. Affiliated Court Reporters invests in ongoing training and equipment to remain current with industry standards and technological developments.

Attorneys benefit from a single point of contact for all related services, simplifying coordination across multiple depositions and hearings. This comprehensive model has fostered enduring client relationships built on trust and consistent performance.

Affiliated Court Reporters continues its longstanding role in Minnesota's legal community by addressing the evolving needs of class action practice. The firm's dedication to accuracy, efficiency, and client support positions it as a valuable resource for law firms navigating these complex cases.
